DETAILED ACTION

Priority

1. Receipt is acknowledged of papers submitted under 35 U.S.C. 119(a)-(d), which papers have been placed of record in the file.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claims 9 & 17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 9 & 17 are drawn to a “program” per se, therefore, fails to fall within a statutory category of invention.

A claim directed to a computer program itself is non-statutory because it is not:

A process occurring as a result of executing the program, or

A machine programmed to operate in accordance with the program, or

A manufacture structurally and functionally interconnected with the program in a manner which enable the program to act as a computer component and realize its functionality, or

A composition of matter.

See MPEP § 2106.01. Data structures not claimed as embodied in computer readable media are descriptive material per se and are not statutory because they are not capable of causing functional change in the computer. See, e.g., Warmerdam, 33 F.3d at 1361, 31 USPQ2d at 1760 (claim to a data structure per se held nonstatutory). Such claimed data structures do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and other claimed aspects of the invention, which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer readable medium encoded with a data structure defines structural and functional interrelationships between the data structure and the computer software and hardware components which permit the data structure's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory. Similarly, computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs are not physical "things". They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer, which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized.

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 1-8 & 10-16 are allowed over the prior art of record.
5. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

The prior art of record alone or in combination fails to teach or suggest:

in claim 1 (claim 8 has similar limitations), a recording apparatus that records first data in a recordable recording medium, the recording apparatus characterized by comprising: recording means that records the first data in the recording medium; generating means that generates, for each predetermined recording unit, second data indicating a model of the own apparatus; and calculating means that applies a predetermined function to third data, which is included in the first data recorded in the recording medium by the recording means and changes every time the first data is recorded in the recording medium by the recording means, to thereby calculate a discrimination code indicating that the recording apparatus recorded the first data in the recording medium, and in that the recording means further records the discrimination code calculated by the calculating means, the third data, and the second data generated by the generating means in the recording medium; and in claim 10 (claim 16 has similar limitations), a reproducing apparatus that reproduces first data recorded in a recording medium, the reproducing apparatus characterized by comprising: readout means that reads out, from the recording medium, second data indicating a model of a recording apparatus that performed recording of the first data in the recording medium, third data that changes every time data is recorded in the recording medium, and a first discrimination code indicating the model of the recording apparatus that recorded the first data in the recording medium, the second data, the third data, and the first discrimination code being included in the first data; calculating means that calculates a second discrimination code indicating the model of the recording apparatus, which recorded the first data in the recording medium, by applying a predetermined function to the third data read out by the readout means; and executing means that executes predetermined processing using the second data when the second discrimination code calculated by the calculating means and the first discrimination code read out by the readout means coincide with each other.

Claims 2-7 & 11-15 are dependent upon allowed base claims.

Conclusion
